

President Barker Speaks on Sustainability at Clemson University:

Clemson University's President Barker expresses his vision for sustainability at Clemson, the obligation that all colleges and universities hold to reduce carbon emissions, and the progress of Clemson's Sustainability Action plan.

1. What is our obligation for sustainability as Clemson students?
2. What is our obligation as people of the earth to conserve and protect our natural resources?
3. Clemson University would like to serve as a model for energy conservation by having the goal of becoming a carbon neutral campus by the year 2030. What lifestyle changes can you make to help this goal come into fruition? How can you live a more sustainable lifestyle?
4. What can you do to help others understand the importance of being sustainable?
5. What kind of message do you think is conveyed when the President of our institution is in support of sustainability?
